Minister withholds TDSB funds, threatens to send in supervisor

Cost of school building projects. Possible $11M overrun prompts province to freeze funds

A political firestorm has erupted between Ontario and its largest school board over cost overruns for building projects, with an "outraged" education minister Laurel Broten warning Thursday she won't rule out sending a supervisor to take over the Toronto District School Board's affairs if needed.

Angry trustees countered they're just as outraged by Queen's Park's bid to "micro-manage" their projects. Trustee Irene Atkinson even suggested the board hold a day of protest.

Broten came out swinging Thursday, a day after her ministry informed the board it has frozen funding for new TDSB building projects, citing the possible $10-$11 million cost overrun for the retrofit of the historic building that houses Nelson Mandela Public School in Regent Park.

"A number of TDSB trustees indicated their outrage? Well, I am also outraged," Broten told reporters.

"We are not happy they don't know why" the $21.7-million project could cost up to $11 million more. Broten said the Nelson Mandela school project was the "most egregious" example of overspending, and that the government will send in a supervisor — as it has at other troubled boards — if circumstances warrant.

"If we get the ... advice (that) that's what is needed, we will take those steps." The board is already under fire for the outrageous cost of maintenance and repairs exposed by Torstar News Service earlier this year, such as $143 to install a pencil sharpener in one school.

"Since 2010, the ministry has been concerned about the TDSB's capital deficit that is now at just under $50 million," said Broten's spokesperson Paris Meilleur. But this year concerns grew over new projects, the expanded scope of others and changing price tags, she said, which reached a peak with the Nelson Mandela overrun. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

TRUDEAU MAKES HIS GTA DEBUT

Liberal leadership candidate Justin Trudeau greets supporters at a rally in Mississauga on Thursday. Trudeau says people are flocking to his Liberal leadership campaign because they're hungry for something better than the ruling Conservative government. With well over 1,000 people crammed into a Mississauga banquet hall to see him, Trudeau's three-day-old campaign picked up even more steam with its debut in the GTA. Police seize nearly $750,000 in drugs

A 49-year-old man was charged following a vehicle traffic stop in Markham which led to investigators seizing nearly $750,000 in drugs.

Police said the man was stopped on Tuesday around 4:45 p.m. where he was not only found to be operating a vehicle with a suspended driver's licence but was discovered to be in possession of $1,500 in cash and 1 kg of MDMA (Ecstasy) worth an estimated $25,000.

A search warrant was carried out on his house on Rubin St. in Richmond Hill where investigators seized 11 kg of MDMA worth $275,000 and 41 kg of hashish worth $410,000.

Stephen Enoch Paul faces three charges: Trafficking, possession for the purpose of trafficking and possession of a controlled substance.

On Thursday, the 45-year-old man who constructed a dungeon in a Pickering farmhouse was sentenced to two years less a day, the maximum time that can be served in a provincial jail.

Ontario Court Justice Mary Teresa Devlin said the significant sentence had to "send a clear message to Mr. White that his criminal behaviour was wrong.

'Pinball' testifies he gave alleged fraudster $57K

Former Argos coach. Michael Clemons says accused was 'persistent' in building confidence, trust

Michael "Pinball" Clemons is a trusting person.

He admitted as much Thursday during his testimony in the trial of alleged fraudster Walter Garrick, who Clemons said helped out his family in times of need with extravagant donations in order to gain that trust.

In the opening day of evidence in the case against Garrick, 43, the Crown called the former Toronto Argonauts head coach to detail how he had given the Oakville man $57,000 of his own money for what he believed to be investments made on his behalf.

But when no profits materialized, Clemons, 47, said he grew skeptical he would ever see his money again.

"You take someone ... at their word," Clemons said on the stand, dressed in a navy blue suit and pale pink shirt. "He was a gentleman."

The two first met at an Oakville grocery store in 2003. Clemons said he was approached by Garrick, who said he had been "looking forward to try to connect" with him.

Clemons said a "very well-spoken" Garrick told him about how he had become a multi-millionaire using his company, Garcorp, to make investments while studying at Columbia University. He dropped big names including members of the wealthy Rothschild banking family, Clemons testified.

Following their first encounter, Clemons said it was Garrick who pursued him.

"He was persistent in calling," Clemons said.

As their relationship grew, Clemons said he came to believe Garrick had a "very high financial literacy," was willing to make large charitable donations and was interested in purchasing naming rights to a new football stadium that had been proposed at York University. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Palestine Film Festival wraps up fifth year with high hopes

Closing weekend. Hosting legendary musician Marcel Khalife is 'definitely our most ambitious feat,' says organizer

DEENA DOUARA
deena.douara@metronews.ca

The Toronto Palestine Film Festival celebrates the culmination of its fifth year on Saturday with a bang. A particularly melodic, soulful and rousing bang.

Legendary composer and musician Marcel Khalife will be performing with the Al Mayadine Ensemble at the Toronto Centre for the Arts as part of a larger Canadian tour.

If you are lucky enough to get a ticket before the show sells out for the second time, expect audience shoulder-bumping, swaying, singing and, not implausibly, crying.

"Hosting Marcel Khalife is definitely our most ambitious feat," says Dania Majid, a festival organizer, "but we wanted to celebrate the milestone in a big way."

The Lebanese Khalife pays homage to iconic Palestinian poet Mahmoud Darwish in his latest album and tour, Fall of the Moon.

Marcel Khalife will perform with the Al Mayadine Ensemble on Saturday at the Toronto Centre for the Arts as part of a larger Canadian tour. CONTRIBUTED

While Darwish's poetry is recognized across the Arab world for its eloquent exploration of exile, struggle and identity, Khalife also places Darwish's words in the context of the Arab Spring.

The film festival hosting him in Toronto, or TPFF as its known, "is a place to experience Palestinian culture firsthand and to showcase Palestinian cinema," says Majid, "because those films don't necessarily receive mainstream coverage." She says audience members of all backgrounds have told her how proud they are that the festival exists here in Toronto.

While the overall mood is upbeat and "celebratory," Majid admits some of the films are quite difficult to watch.

In fact, the festival opened with its heaviest film, the documentary The War Around Us, which blends footage of the 2008 war on Gaza with interviews of the only two Western journalists covering the events live.

While the mood is a departure for TPFF's large openings, Majid says the committee felt it was powerful and important to screen to a wide audience. "The response was overwhelmingly positive," she says. "People were grateful we screened it."

Since its debut in 2008, TPFF has expanded beyond focusing solely on Palestinian-related film and now also includes an Arab Perspectives segment, an art show, brunch, summertime outdoor screenings, and panel discussions.

So what is in store for the festival's next five years?

"Oh," Majid says, taken aback. "I'm so tired, I haven't even thought that far ahead. If we still exist in five years, it will be an accomplishment." The festival is run entirely by volunteers and fundraising is a constant concern.

Three final films will round out the festival this weekend. Screening Friday are Crayons of Askalan — a Hot Docs official selection — as well as Beyond the Walls, co-presented with Amnesty, and No One is Illegal.

The closing film, Habibi, based on the Arab world's own Romeo and Juliet tale, screens Saturday at TIFF Bell Lightbox, 7 p.m. For more on the festival visit tpff.ca.

New strategy

Ontario wants more say selecting immigrants

The province will seriously pursue an immigration strategy similar to Quebec's, which allows it to pick and choose its own immigrants, says Ontario's immigration minister. "If I had greater devolution power, I could better respond to the needs specific to the province," Charles Sousa said after receiving a panel's recommendations on fixing Ontario's immigration woes.

The report made 32 recommendations to help the province come up with a strategy to address immigrant selection, settlement and integration.

PROPOSED FARE INCREASE WELL WITHIN RATE OF INFLATION

ANDY BYFORD
CEO
TORONTO TRANSIT COMMISSION

Last week, TTC Commissioners (our board of directors) debated the TTC's preliminary budget for 2013. As you have likely heard by now, this includes a five-cent fare increase to take effect Jan. 1.

Let me explain why a modest fare increase, which is well within the rate of inflation, is necessary.

The TTC has four primary influences on its budget:

- Subsidy from the City of Toronto
- Service levels
- Costs to run the TTC, other than direct service
- Revenue from fares and other sources, such as advertising.

Today, a budget gap of $10 million, after a five-cent fare increase has been factored in, remains. I will continue to look for efficiencies inside the TTC to help close this gap. Last year, we found $50 million in permanent savings. As well, we eliminated more than 200 management and administrative positions inside the TTC.

Next year, we will be carrying ever-increasing numbers of riders, with 528 million rides expected, an all-time record. While this is excellent news, the economics are such that each ride costs more than the revenue it brings in, so an operating subsidy from the city is always required.

While subsidy levels will not rise in 2013, the TTC has committed not to cut routes or service next year. In fact, we added service this fall to meet ever-growing customer numbers. And we are adding more service in 2013 to accommodate the record ridership expected.

As I said, we have worked to restrict a fare increase to the rate of inflation. Cash and child fares will remain untouched, but we propose that the monthly adult Metropass go from $126 to $128.50 and tokens from $2.60 to $2.65.

As we move towards a more modern TTC, I will continue to lobby for more equitable and predictable funding from all levels of government that recognizes the importance of keeping Toronto moving.

More on all of this later this fall. For now, I wish you all a safe weekend and a very Happy Thanksgiving!

Q & A: BUNCHING & GAPPING

I understand that it's inevitable that buses sometime bunch up, leading to two or even three buses travelling in a pack surrounded by uncomfortably long gaps. What mechanisms does the TTC employ to detect and resolve this when it happens?

— Steve

Hi Steve,

TTC bus and streetcar routes operate out of nine divisions (seven bus and two streetcar) located across Toronto. Each division employs supervisors who oversee all TTC routes. Route supervisors monitor routes and communicate with vehicles system-wide or individually. Vehicles are tracked using GPS units, which display the vehicles' locations on the supervisors' computers. Using an aerial perspective, supervisors can see vehicles travelling in any direction, and determine if bunching has occurred.

Bunching typically happens on routes with frequent service. On these routes, "headway," or the distance between vehicles, is two to five minutes. If pedestrian traffic, left-turning vehicles, a collision or police investigation delays a vehicle for more than two to five minutes, the next vehicle will undoubtedly catch up. When this happens, gaps — and longer wait times — are created heading in the opposite direction. In order to fill those gaps, supervisors will "short turn" a vehicle. While short-turning creates inconvenient delays for customers on the short-turning vehicle, it helps get the entire route back to normal as quickly as possible.

Thanks!

TTC

EVENTS

LOST ARTICLES

Lost Articles customer service representative Richard Leone.

At the TTC Lost Articles Office at Bay Station, staff begins sorting through bags of items that had been collected from bus, streetcar, subway and SRT routes the previous day. The items, left behind by customers on their busy, sometimes weary-eyed commute, are gathered at our seven bus and two streetcar divisions, and entered into a database. The items are categorized by the day, time and route on which the item was found.

Once complete, the items are then shipped to Bay Station, where Lost Articles staff carefully match the item with the description, and update the profile with as much information as they can get — colour, shape, model, brand and name, if identified.

In some cases, customers notice they've lost something and will find their way to Bay Station to see if it has turned up. After the customer provides a description, Lost Articles staff will check the database and happily reunite them with their lost article. In other cases, customers will not come looking and it's up to staff to find the rightful owner. If a wallet is found, for example, and there was a bank card, but no identification, Lost Articles staff will call the bank and ask them to contact the customer to let them know their card and wallet has been found.

The TTC Lost Articles Office receives approximately 40,000 items per year, and only 35 per cent of items are successfully returned to their owners. The rest are sold at a police auction. Not surprisingly, people have the hardest time describing their lost glasses. The common response is that the frames are dark.

So what advice does Lost Articles staff give to people who take the TTC? Take a good look at the items you carry with you. If you do misplace something, try to jot down the day and route. It will be much easier to find.

The TTC's Lost Articles Office is located in Bay station and is open to the public from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday to Friday, except holidays. You can also call 416-393-4100, Monday to Friday, noon to 5 p.m. (except holidays).

Famous apology #1

Tiger Woods, 2010

"Elin and I have started the process of discussing the damage caused by my behaviour. As she pointed out to me, my real apology to her will not come in the form of words. It will come from my behaviour over time. We have a lot to discuss. However, what we say to each other will remain between the two of us.... I was wrong. I was foolish. I don't get to play by different rules."

Famous apology #2

Bill Clinton, 1998

"I agree with those who have said that in my first statement after I testified, I was not contrite enough. I don't think there is a fancy way to say that I have sinned. It is important to me that everybody who has been hurt know that the sorrow I feel is genuine: First and most important, my family. Also my friends, my staff, my cabinet, Monica Lewinsky and her family, and the American people. I have asked all for their forgiveness."

Famous apology #3

James McGreevey, 2004

"I am sorry that my actions have hurt those that I love in my personal and political lives.... I am sorry that I have disappointed citizens of the state of New Jersey who gave me this enormous trust. To be clear, I am not apologizing for being a gay American, but rather for having let personal feelings impact my decision-making and for not having the courage to be open about whom I was."

Arnold's back, with no apology for peddling his new book

Signing event. Toronto fans prove a forgiving bunch when it comes to Arnold Schwarzenegger

jessica.smith@metronews.ca

"Arnold, Arnold, Arnold" filled the Indigo bookstore on Bloor Street on Thursday before Arnold Schwarzenegger walked down the stage and waved to the crowd on the only Canadian stop of his book-signing tour.

Schwarzenegger is fresh off a round of interviews with U.S. media promoting his book Total Recall: My Unbelievably True Life Story, in which he talks of leaving Austria for America, his body-building career, business dealings, years as governor of California — and how he had an affair with his housekeeper, fathered a child but didn't tell his wife as the woman continued working in their home for years.

In the book, he recounts apologizing to his wife, Maria Shriver, in their therapist's office, telling her how sorry he felt, how wrong it was and how it was his fault.

"I f–ed up," he remembers telling her. "You're the perfect wife. It's not because anything is wrong, or you left home for a week or any of that. Forget that. You look fantastic, you're sexy, I'm turned on by you today as much as I was on the first date."

To some of the fans who lined up overnight in Toronto, his public mea culpa was unnecessary.

"I don't really think it's the public's business," said Paul McLoughlin, who lined up at the bookstore at 7:30 p.m. — more than 16 hours before the signing began. "I know he's a celebrity, but apologize to your wife.

"A lot of people are saying it's him trying to save his career," he added. "I think partially it's for public relations, but I do not doubt there's some sincerity to it."

There was no hint of regret or apology as Schwarzenegger told the crowd he loves Canada. "You're great fans," he said. "I know this from the movie business, how you've followed my career, always have supported me. So I want to say thank you very much, and again, I promise, I'll be back."

A big shout-out to Canada

"Today I am back here with my book, Total Recall. It's a book I've started promoting in America, but I didn't want to do this without coming to Canada."

"His life, honest to God, is his life. He has his life, I have my life ... Everyone can make mistakes in life, and learn big lessons. It could be he learned himself a lesson, and apologized."

Toros Djerdjeian, known as "Mr. Canada"

"I am the kind of person that, I forgive. Everyone has to be forgiven and have a second chance. No one is perfect."

Anna Lopes, lined up at midnight

"Look, I believe what he said. He's human, he's made mistakes. He's admitted to them, he's come clean and we wish him all the best."

Alex Konstantis, came from Montreal with his daughter, lined up at 8 p.m.

True apologies must show complete regret, expert says

How does a person distinguish a full, meaningful apology from an insubstantial "sorry" from someone who steps on your toe, or from a slick politician with an agenda?

Nick Smith has asked that very question. Smith, an associate professor of philosophy at the University of New Hampshire, has identified the elements by which an apology can be judged to determine if it is a "categorical," or full, apology.

"Fluency in the language of apologies should provide a defence against politicians, corporate executives, attorneys, criminals or lovers who seek to use the illusion of their moral transformation to win our favour," he writes in his paper The Categorical Apology.

Smith writes that the apologizer must admit all the facts of the wrongdoing and to having caused the wrong. Each moral wrong committed must be accounted for and the apologizer and victim must share the moral principles that were breached, and which apology is based on.

An apology must be based on fulsome, complete regret and offenders must reform their behaviour and find a way to make reparations to the victim, Smith writes. The apologizer must be responsible for the wrong, and not merely sorry for it — and make the apology with the right intentions.

Smith has little use for a disingenuous apology. "In theory, disingenuous apologies can serve important functions, but they usually just create more lies, distrust and suffering," he writes in an email interview with Metro.

However, he does believe apologies by public figures can live up to the full, substantial apologies he terms "categorical." Indeed, these can be preferable to a private apology because the wrongdoer can he held to account.

Apologies by cheating spouses made in public "get complicated," Smith says.

"For what is the wrongdoer apologizing? For the infidelity to the spouse, or for some breach of public trust? Here we can look for those who apologize for the lesser offence without admitting blame for the more serious harm. This also raises suspicion regarding intentions: Is this intended as a way to reconcile with the spouse or as a strategy for damage control with various constituencies?" Smith writes.

Not all public apologies are well-received, something Smith believes speaks to the character of the apologizer.

"Apologies — as well as the absence of apologies — can place a public figure's moral core on display," he says. "Sometimes a deceptive and meaningless apology is exactly what we would expect from certain people, and the apology offers another data point into their character."

JESSICA SMITH/METRO

Meat plant not resuming any time soon: Ritz

E. coli. Agriculture minister faces calls for resignation amid one of Canada's largest food recalls

The company at the centre of Canada's latest E. coli scare broke its silence Thursday as Agriculture Minister Gerry Ritz stared down a firestorm of opposition criticism of one of the largest food recalls in Canadian history.

XL Foods Inc., which operates the meat plant in Brooks, Alta., where the contamination first occurred, made its first public comments on the recall since the crisis began in early September.

"We take full responsibility for our plant operations and the food it produces, which is consumed by Canadians from coast to coast," the company said in a news release.

Ritz, meanwhile, called a news conference on short notice — his second in as many days — to address what he called "misinformation" about the E. coli scare.

The XL plant has had its licence suspended, and it won't be restored until the minister gets written notice from the Canadian Food Inspection Agency that the plant is safe, Ritz said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

E. coli vaccine

A breakthrough vaccine that prevents cattle from shedding E. coli before the animals are sent to slaughter has been on the market for several years but isn't widely used. Bioniche, the Ontario company that produces the vaccine, says less than five per cent of Canadian cattle are getting the shots.

Police raid home, office of mayor

Quebec's new anti-corruption squad launched its highest-profile raid against a politician, sifting through the personal residence and the offices of the mayor of a major Montreal-area municipality Thursday.

The searches targeted Gilles Vaillancourt, the powerful mayor who has enjoyed a 23-year reign at the helm of Laval, Que.

A spokeswoman for the anti-corruption unit wouldn't say what was being seized but she confirmed material was gathered as part of an ongoing investigation. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Forcible confinement. Suspect in N.S. case found dead in Ontario

The countrywide manhunt for Wayne Cunningham — wanted on charges of sexual assault and forcible confinement of a 16-year-old Nova Scotia boy — is over.

Police found the 31-year-old's body near where a 2003 Hyundai Elantra was located on Wednesday in the area of Longlac, in northern Ontario.

His body was discovered by Ontario Provincial Police during a ground search of the area around 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

"There are no winners in this one, that's for sure," RCMP spokesman Const. Alain LeBlanc said of the case.

Cunningham was one of two people charged in the confinement case of the 16-year-old boy at a home in Lunenburg County.

Earlier this week, David James Leblanc was arrested in the same region of Ontario by the OPP's Greenstone detachment. He was wanted for the same charges as Cunningham.

A parole-board assessment of Cunningham done more than five years ago said he was troubled by emotional issues surrounding his sexuality. PHILIP CROUCHER/METRO IN HALIFAX

Romney reinvigorated

Post-debate analysis. U.S. president's lacklustre performance in first faceoff with Republican challenger leaves pundits puzzled

Mitt Romney's slam dunk of a debate performance against a comparatively listless U.S. President Barack Obama is sparking talk of a renewed horse race a month before the Nov. 6 election, while prompting fretful hand-wringing by bewildered Democrats.

Debates haven't historically changed the course of a U.S. presidential election campaign, but giddy Republicans are hoping 2012 could be the exception to that rule as they eagerly await a new batch of post-debate poll numbers.

Suddenly embraced and celebrated by Republicans who have long been cool to his candidacy, Romney was greeted to a hero's welcome when he bounded to the stage at a conservative event in Colorado on Thursday.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

A day late?

Obama looks to rebound

Obama tried to rebound Thursday by telling his rival, "If you want to be president, you owe the American people the truth."

Obama's remarks at a Colorado campaign event were a sharp contrast to his uncomfortable, low-energy appearance Wednesday night. Obama's campaign on Thursday promised "adjustments" would be made.

And Obama appeared to wake up Thursday, attacking Romney for offering plans to fix the still-weak economy without saying how he would do it.

"Here's the truth: Gov. Romney cannot pay for his $5-trillion tax plan without blowing up the deficit or sticking it to the middle class," Obama said.

11.1M

With 11.1 million comments, Wednesday's debate was the fourth-most-tweeted telecast of any kind, coming in just behind the most recent Grammy awards, MTV Video Music Awards and the Super Bowl, according to The Crowdwire, an election project of Bluefin Labs, a social analytics firm.

55%

Some 55 per cent of comments about the debate were made by women, The Crowdwire found.

27,500

Romney said he would defund public broadcasting to help bring down the deficit, but added that he liked Big Bird of PBS's Sesame Street. Social networks immediately responded, with participants posting spoof photos of Big Bird and setting up parody Big Bird Twitter accounts. @firedbigbird garnered 27,500 followers in 12 hours, but the account was then suspended.

"Obama killed bin Laden. Romney put a hit on Big Bird."

Turkey OKs use of military force on Syria

Cross-border shelling. Both countries firing at each other as civil war threatens to extend beyond borders

Turkey doesn't want war with Syria, but it's determined to protect its borders and its people, the country's prime minister declared Thursday.

Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan spoke at a news conference hours after Parliament approved a bill authorizing military operations against Syria. Earlier, Turkey fired on targets in Syria for a second day following a Syrian shelling that killed five civilians in the border town of Akcakale.

Erdogan suggested that the Syrian shelling was not accidental, saying such shells had fallen on Turkish territory on seven previous occasions since Syria's civil war began last year.

"We want peace and security and nothing else. We would never want to start a war," Erdogan said, speaking from Akcakale. "Turkey is a country which is capable of protecting its people and borders. No one should attempt to test our determination on the issue."

For its part, Syria admitted it was responsible for the shelling that killed five people and formally apologized for the deaths, another top Turkish official said.

Deputy Prime Minister Besir Atalay said Syria has reassured the UN that "such an incident will not occur again."

Atalay said Parliament's authorization was not declaration of war on Syria but gives Turkey the right to respond to any future attacks from Syria.

"The bill is not for war," Atalay said. "It has deterrent qualities." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

I had done it so many times before. Checking email, checking-in on social media sites... I thought I was being really efficient. I knew I shouldn't have done it while driving. But it was something so simple. So quick and easy. I had no idea that this would be my last check-in. Ever.

Be smart and keep your eyes on the road. Distracted Driving kills.

Oddball collateral: Stained sock could offset bad loans

World Series keepsake. Ex-pitcher guaranteed millions to failed video-game firm — now, he might have to give up his famous bloody sock

Curt Schilling's bloody sock, shown here on display at the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Former Boston Red Sox pitcher Curt Schilling might have to sell or give up one of the famed blood-stained socks he wore on the team's way to the 2004 World Series championship to cover millions of dollars in loans he guaranteed to his failed video-game company.

Schilling, whose Providence-based 38 Studios filed for bankruptcy in June, listed the sock as collateral to Bank Rhode Island in a September filing with the Massachusetts Secretary of State's office.

The sock is on display at the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum in Cooperstown, N.Y. It was stained during the second game of the 2004 World Series, which the Red Sox won that year for the first time in 86 years. (Another of Schilling's socks had been similarly stained with blood earlier in the playoffs, during Game 6 of the American League Championship Series, but that one was thrown in the garbage.)

Schilling also listed a baseball hat believed to have been worn by New York Yankees great Lou Gehrig and his collection of Second World War memorabilia.

Richie Russek, owner of the Westhampton, N.Y.-based Grey Flannel Auctions, who is featured on The Discovery Channel series All Star Dealers, estimated the sock could sell for between $50,000 and $100,000 US, but stressed nothing comparable has ever been auctioned off. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Unharvested corn stands south of Council Bluffs, Iowa, Thursday. The U.S.'s worst drought in decades is continuing in several key Midwest farming states, and farmers worry their winter crops may also be at risk. NATI HARNIK/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Drought now threatens Midwest winter crops

Unrelenting dryness. About one-fifth of land in lower 48 states is in extreme or exceptional drought condition

America's worst drought in decades is showing no sign of letting up in several key Midwest farming states, worrying farmers harvesting the summer's withered corn crop in record time that their winter crops may also be at risk.

Overall drought conditions in the lower 48 states held steady over the seven-day period ending Tuesday, with about one-fifth of the total land area in extreme or exceptional drought, the two worst classifications, according to the U.S. Drought Monitor's weekly update of its drought map released Thursday.

Conditions worsened, though, in Kansas and Iowa, the nation's biggest corn producer, and nearly 98 per cent of Nebraska was still deemed to be in one of the two worst categories. The unrelenting dryness won't have much effect on the region's corn and soybean crops, which are already being plucked from the fields. But it could hurt other crops, such as winter wheat.

According to the map put out by the National Drought Mitigation Center at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, 75 per cent of Iowa is enduring extreme or exceptional drought. That's up roughly 10 percentage points from the previous week.

1 Not berry good. The 2012 global brand rankings were revealed this week, and despite recent stock invigoration, BlackBerry dropped to No. 93 from No. 56. The top three are Coke, Apple and IBM. Here's the good news: When RIM finally releases its BlackBerry 10, users waltzing leisurely into the local tech shop to buy it will laugh at lineup-enduring iPhone fans.

2 Waste management. An explosion at Nippon Shokubai Co. chemical plant in Japan, which produces a major component found in diapers, could lead to a shortage of the sought-after product. I can't wait to see how they make us try to recycle these.

3 Car-ful. Google engineers have been testing driverless cars for years, and now there is legislation being put in place to get them on California roads. With radar sensors, video cameras and high-tech software, they have driven more than 500,000 kilometres on streets and highways without a single accident. Another reminder that cars don't crash, people do. Still, I can just see mine getting pissed at me for, like, spilling coffee, and pumping the brakes so that my head repeatedly hits the windshield until I pass out, then stealing my Visa and going to a drive-in! I'll keep the Corolla, thanks.

4 Objection! Pussy Riot's appeal against the conviction for their lauded Putin protest was adjourned after one member fired her lawyer. Classic stalling tactic. These girls know that the sooner this thing ends, the quicker we'll all discover that their music stinks.

5 Hoops and dreams. NBA pre-season begins this week, and there is much excitement surrounding the Toronto Raptors. With a true centre and defensive point guard to complement Bargnani, they're looking great. OK, maybe not great, but good. All right, well at least better than last year. Maybe.

6 Holy mackerel! Research from UBC uncovered yet another ill effect of global warming: smaller fish. Apparently, warmer water increases the body temperature of fish, which raises their metabolic rate. In addition to burning more calories, their food chain becomes increasingly leaner. Producers of the Biggest Loser are already planning next season's underwater program.

7 Jammin'. This week in 1975, Stevie Wonder appeared at the Wonder Dream Concert, a benefit for the blind in Kingston, Jamaica. He joined the original Wailers — Bob Marley, Peter Tosh and Bunny Wailer — as they performed together for the last time. I always knew Stevie was a s–t disturber.

8 So what now? This week in 1996, Breakfast At Tiffany's by Deep Blue Something was No. 1 in the U.K. The song is a reference to the classic Audrey Hepburn film. Andy Williams, who sang the film's theme song, Moon River, succumbed to cancer last week at age 84. Well, it was interesting to me.

9 TIMA Time! The 2012 Toronto Independent Music Awards are back at the Phoenix Theatre in Toronto this Saturday. Hosted by Sean Ward, and chock full o' rock 'n' roll, the $15 ticket is the music lover's bargain-palooza. Most importantly, this year's proceeds will go to MusiCounts, a charity dedicated to keeping music education in Canadian public schools, so you feel good twice!

Liam Neeson gets his Chuck Norris on again in Taken 2. HANDOUT

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

The Reel Guys aren't Taken this time out

Predictable plot.
Liam Neeson's sequel to his surprise 2008 hit lacks the suspense that made the original so much fun

Richard: Mark, I think much of the fun of 2008's Taken was watching beloved thespian Liam Neeson go all Chuck Norris in a dirty little Euro trash thriller. It was unexpected, and it was fun. The sequel doesn't have that same gritty magic. It's silly, talky, and with a director with the last name Megaton, I expected some heavy action, but it didn't deliver.

Mark: Richard, it's hard to create any suspense when you know exactly what's going to happen next. In the original, Neeson had to unravel a mystery that led him deeper and deeper into the belly of a beast. In this sequel, he just has to pick off a bunch of Albanian sitting ducks. He has no real adversaries — his antagonists are village idiots. The whole movie screamed "cash grab" to me.

RC: Did you feel "Taken" advantage of? I kind of did. A movie like this has to surprise us somehow. Last time out it was seeing Neeson as an action hero as he got physical with hundreds of foes. This time they could have seized the opportunity to expand the daughter's role and turn her into a super spy, but instead it's simply more of the same, only less, if you get what I mean.

MB: I did like the way Neeson used his CIA training to figure out where he was and the way he worked with his daughter to free himself. But if he used the words "Focus, Kim!" one more time I would have thrown my popcorn at the screen. The dialogue was so clunky I can't even discuss the acting. And the epilogue! Finally, an answer to the question consuming our thoughts throughout the movie, "Will Kim pass her driving test?"

RC: The post Istanbul scenes (and this is no spoiler, 'cuz you know how this movie will end before it starts) feel like outtakes from the Brady Bunch—Kim at her driving test; Kim brings her boyfriend to lunch. The only difference? Mr. Brady never had to shoot up half the planet to rescue Marcia, Jan or Cindy.

MB: The other difference? In the Brady Bunch, the acting, writing, and direction were better.

Synopsis

Picking up where 2008's Taken left off, the sequel sees an Albanian mafia head vowing revenge against Bryan Mills (Liam Neeson), the man who killed his son. It's set in Istanbul, where the Mills family — daughter Kim (Maggie Grace) who was kidnapped in Paris and almost sold into prostitution in the last film, and her mother Lenore — is trying to enjoy a holiday. When Bryan and Lenore are taken by the mob, Kim must work to free them.

John Goodman gets his makeup on in true tale of a covert CIA operation

Pulling out the prosthetics. Actor captures essence of a Hollywood artist who lent his talents to undercover missions

scene@metronews.ca

John Goodman plays makeup artist John Chambers in Argo, which opens next Friday. HANDOUT

In the new thriller Argo, John Goodman plays unsung hero John Chambers.

The real life Chambers was a legendary Hollywood makeup artist who created techniques in the 1960s while working on films like Planet of the Apes, which are still used today. Most famously he designed the pointed Spock ears worn by Leonard Nimoy on Star Trek.

He was also a civilian CIA operative. He never won an Academy Award, but the spy organization gave him their highest civilian honour for his help on various missions, including the daring rescue of six American diplomats during the Iranian hostage crisis of 1979.

Not much is known of Chambers's exploits, but Goodman felt he needed to get the essence of the man right.

"I could be funny and say I don't want to get my eye gouged out by an angry makeup guy," he says when I ask if he feels responsibility to Chambers. "He was kind of the progenitor of people I work with. There was a boom in the '60s with prosthetic makeup and he was the wellhead of it. To not take that seriously would be to deny the craftsmen working now and the work that he did do for his government serving his country."

Goodman shares most of his scenes with another Hollywood legend, Alan Arkin, who plays movie producer Lester Siegel.

"I think the world of him," he says. "He has always touched something in me as an actor that was real and truthful. How does he do it? The things I've heard him say over the years and the way he started, with Second City and as a musician, has always fascinated me.

"We would sit and talk about jazz-bop, Charlie Parker, Slim Gaillard and all those cats. We found a vocabulary and it was immediate to me that I could relax with him because I could trust him."

And Goodman is quick to acknowledge Canada's involvement in the rescue.

"Those people were heroes," he says of Taylor and the Canadians who hid the U.S. refugees.

"I can't imagine doing that with the riots going on outside, the constant reminder that you are risking your lives; risking a very gruesome death. There would have been torture. But it was pulled off with typical Canadian aplomb."

Drama

Winnie

Director. Darrell Roodt

Stars. Jennifer Hudson, Terence Howard

There isn't much insight to be gleaned from the biopic Winnie that isn't probably already covered on its main subject's Wikipedia page. Based on the life of Winnie Mandela (Jennifer Hudson) and her doomed relationship to apartheid advocate and eventual South African president Nelson Mandela (Terrence Howard), the mollified memoir plays too broad to manage a moral stance and winds up painting a provocative profile into dismissive melodrama.

STEVE GOW

Animation

Frankenweenie

Director. Tim Burton

Stars. Winona Ryder, Catherine O'Hara, Martin Short

An expansion of Tim Burton's practically perfect short film, this deluxe gorgeously produced child's eye horror comedy is — despite its revel in all things macabre — ideal family fare. In the haunted town of New Holland, budding grade school science enthusiast Victor loses his beloved pal, a spunky Jack Russel named Sparky. Of course, not even death will keep them apart and faster than you can say Boris Karloff, Sparky is back in action…though a little worse for wear and in need of constant electrical recharge. The stop motion animation is state of the art. A wonderful, creepy Halloween treat.

CHRIS ALEXANDER

Documentary

Detropia

Directors. Heidi Ewing, Rachel Grady

Detropia, the latest film from co-directors Heidi Ewing and Rachel Grady, documents the decline of Detroit, a once great American city. The film is full of staggering facts (Michigan lost 50 per cent of its manufacturing jobs in the last 10 years) and stark images of the city's decay (entire blocks of vacant houses amidst tall, uncut grass). Moreover, the characters that the filmmakers have chosen to tell Detroit's story are compelling, passionate, "everyday" citizens that have important lessons to share. But despite all of these successful elements, the film is slow-paced and lacks a narrative arc, ultimately making it feel aimless.

the Centre of ATTENTION SHAW Conference Centre

Managed by Edmonton Economic Development Corporation (EEDC), the Shaw Conference Centre (SCC) is one of Canada's premier meeting, entertainment, and convention venues, and encourages socially and environmentally responsible event-planning.

Executive Pastry Chef

The Shaw Conference Centre is one of Canada's major convention venues, renowned for its culinary and service excellence. We strive to be Greater Edmonton's flagship hospitality venue by demonstrating superior customer service and leadership excellence.

We are looking for an Executive Pastry Chef who will possess a fundamental role in leading the pastry team and shaping the culture of our kitchen team and the centre in general. Reporting to the Executive Chef, you will be responsible for managing a team of pastry professionals in fulfilling the requirements of event work orders, ensuring the high-quality production of pastries, cakes and breads for a wide variety of small to very large-scale events.

If you possess Red Seal certification, have 3-4 years of pastry chef experience and can lead and motivate staff, please apply online www.shawconferencecentre.com or email your resume to careers@edmonton.com quoting HR Posting#12-040 no later than October 19, 2012.

SCC thanks all applicants. Only those contacted will be interviewed.

Save on Car Insurance by Shopping Around

Nothing to lose, so much to gain.

Getting insurance quotes can be a lengthy process, especially if you're calling around to numerous insurance companies. Online quoting services like InsuranceHotline.com make it easy for drivers to get car insurance quotes that are compared against more than 30 insurance companies – in just 5 to 10 minutes.

Rates change regularly. The most obvious benefit of shopping around for car insurance is the possibility of getting a better rate and saving a lot of money. Because rates change frequently, it's important to check rates periodically, as a rate obtained in the last year could have decreased since then with a different provider. While insurance companies change their rates, your driver profile may have also changed, which will affect your rate – A ticket or accident falling of your record, a vehicle change or a moving to a new home can affect your car insurance rate.

Each insurance company views drivers differently. For drivers with tickets or accidents on their record, the biggest benefit of shopping around is to see which companies may rate that ticket or accident less harshly than others. Each insurance company determines how to rate for different types of tickets or accidents, which means that a better rate may be available somewhere else. In fact, rates can be vastly different for the same driver with the same ticket with two different companies.

Reviewing insurance policy. Shopping for insurance quotes forces drivers to review their policy to make sure that there aren't any errors or omissions about their vehicle or driving history, or perhaps any missed discounts that should be applied. Staying on top of these things ensures having the right coverage and paying the best rate.

Visit InsuranceHotline.com and compare insurance quotes for free, with an unbiased rate comparison from a network of over 30 insurance companies to find a lower car insurance rate. You could save hundreds or even thousands of dollars in just a few minutes.

Making the right choice starts with choice.

Your search for the right insurance rate should be exhaustive, not exhausting. Only InsuranceHotline.com gives you an unbiased comparison of over 30 premier insurance companies, so you can find a rate that works for you — without impacting your coverage.

Visit InsuranceHotline.com and see how a little shopping around could save you hundreds of dollars on your insurance.

Donate today and help support women's health in your community.

Every September, Shoppers Drug Mart® stores across Canada set up a Tree of Life in support of women's health, with 100% of all proceeds going directly to women's health initiatives in your community. Over the years, you've contributed over $17 million and we're hoping you'll help us make a difference again this year.

Visit your local Shoppers Drug Mart between September 29 and October 26 and buy a leaf ($1), a butterfly ($5), an acorn ($10) or a cardinal ($50) to help women's health grow in your community. To find out which women's charity your local Shoppers Drug Mart store supports, visit shoppersdrugmart.ca/treeoflife.

Queen Latifah stars in Steel Magnolias. HANDOUT

Classic tale of female friendship back with award-winning cast

Love and friendship.
Steel Magnolias premieres Monday on Lifetime

ANNE BRODIE
scene@metronews.ca

The 1989 classic film Steel Magnolias is back in a new incarnation, with an all-star, award-winning cast including Queen Latifah, Phylicia Rashad, Jill Scott and Alfre Woodard.

We spoke with Woodard from her car en route to the movie's New York red carpet premiere.

Woodard, who plays the character Ouiser (a role Shirley MacLaine was cast in in the original) says the time was ripe to bring it back.

"The producers imagined an African American cast to bring new life and freshness. They'd been sitting on it, and fans had been asking for years (for the story to be retold)," said Woodard.

Alfre Woodard GETTY IMAGES

She credits the film's success to its focus on the universal principles of love and friendship.

"These women cross economic lines — all lines in that town. They have their other friends and groups, but this is that group that they share things with the way they would share with a sister. It is a trust that goes beyond the casual acquaintances we have," she said.

"We have so many friends, so many people psychologically. It reminds you of a chosen family. You're born into a family, and you're lucky if you get along with them. You choose other people because you recognize them."

Woodard said she enjoyed the fact that the movie had characters viewers could relate to.

"It's filled with characters — and when I say characters, it's about people. You can recognize them. Most of the things we see now in cinema, we can enjoy, but we wouldn't know any of those people in our lives."

Woodard enjoyed sinking her teeth into Ouiser, the colourful, unrepentant neighbourhood battle-axe.

"It was liberating. In life, you always have to behave as if you're being a responsible citizen and neighbour. You have to behave all your life!"

Schwarzenegger reflects on his wrongs

Despite the revelation that he'd fathered a child with a housekeeper, resulting in Maria Shriver filing for divorce, Arnold Schwarzenegger is still optimistic that they'll get back together, he tells Fox News' Sean Hannity. "It takes a lot of time to heal those wounds and to trust each other again. But, you know, I will make every effort," Schwarzenegger says. "I've hurt a lot of people. I hurt my wife tremendously, who doesn't deserve that, and my kids and relatives, all this. I'm embarrassed, ashamed about it, but you can't go back."

Rock and Roll Hall of Fame nominees announced

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Nominees for the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame were announced on Thursday. Just who made the list? Public Enemy, N.W.A., Donna Summer, Deep Purple, Rush, Heart, Joan Jett and the Blackhearts, Randy Newman, Albert King, The Marvelettes, The Meters, Paul Butterfield Blues Band, Procol Harum, Chic and Kraftwerk all made the cut.

A unique mixture, to be sure. And, for the first time in history, fans can vote online at rockhall.com for the acts they want to be inducted into the Hall of Fame ceremony to be held on April 18. I can practically hear my parents cranking their dial-up Internet to cast their vote for Randy Newman as I type.

The Carey and Minaj feud continues

There's a feud going on over at American Idol between new hosts Nicki Minaj and Mariah Carey. But have no fear — Barbara Walters is getting to the bottom of it.

On Thursday's episode of The View, Walters said she spoke with Carey, who relayed that Minaj said 'If I had a gun I would shoot the b—,'" during an on-set altercation the pair had on Monday. Carey hired more security.

Cameron Diaz

Diaz embracing her age

So why has single gal Cameron Diaz avoided the altar for so long? "I'm smart!" she jokes to Esquire magazine. "No, it's hard to say. It just wasn't the thing I was drawn to. I certainly didn't want it in my 20s. Or my 30s." But that doesn't mean Diaz didn't have marriage plans in mind, though they may not be the "till death do us part" kind: "I'd always wanted to get hitched in Vegas at least three times," she says. In any event, Diaz, who recently celebrated her 40th birthday, is feeling better than ever. "For the first time in my life, I'm content," she says. "Getting older is the best part of life. I know myself better. I feel more capable than ever. And as far as the physicality of it I feel better than I did at 25."

A Hollywood Thanksgiving

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

I love Thanksgiving. There are no presents to buy, someone else makes dinner for me and wine is the star of the show.

With all due respect to Christmas, there's no meal during the year that focuses more attention on what you drink with your eats — and for that I'm thankful.

As a professional wine recommender, my favourite thing about Thanksgiving is that it's pretty much roast turkey exclusive. Christmas has the options of lamb, ham, roast beef or even lobster if you're a Maritimer.

Thankfully, Thanksgiving is all about the big bird.

So, let's talk turkey. Like any elaborate holiday meal, the main course doesn't always dictate your liquid direction. Come this weekend, cranberry sauce, stuffing, sweet potatoes and any number of historical family side dishes will attempt to overwhelm your lovingly roasted gobbler.

Crisp, clean sparkling wines make nice with just about everything, as will a dry rosé. If you're into whites try a lightly oaked chardonnay.

I like a red with powerful poultry and the Kim Crawford 2011 Marlborough Pinot Noir ($19.95 - $22.99) is a berry-infused New Zealander with plump raspberry-cherry fruit and an accommodating attitude towards an eclectic plate.

Sage Butter Roast Turkey. Alex Chen, former executive chef for the Beverly Hills Hotel, shares his recipe

Looking to glam up your Thanksgiving this year? How about serving your turkey the way they do in Hollywood?

Former executive chef of the Beverly Hills Hotel, Alex Chen, delighted many of his A-list celebrity clients with this exact recipe.

Vancouver-based Chen actually resigned from his position at the Beverly Hills Hotel to pursue his dream of representing Canada at the world's most prestigious culinary competition, the Bocuse d'Or, which takes place in Lyon, France in January 2013.

After being named Canada's Bocuse d'Or chef for 2013, he assumed the role of Culinary Architect at Moxie's Grill & Bar. With Moxie as the title sponsor of Bocuse d'Or Team Canada, his position allows Chen to prepare for the competition while impacting the restaurant.

The chef's Sage Butter Roast Turkey, with its unique presentation, touches of simple glamour, and emphasis on perfectly cooked meat is a great way to impress this Thanksgiving.

Enter The Man Blog, your guide to everything today's man needs to know. Up now: Canada's Top Chef winner Carl Heinrich shows you how you how to carve a turkey like a pro — impressive! Video at metronews.ca
  Bonus: A sneak peek at Heinrich's new Toronto restaurant, Richmond Station.

THE NIGHT BEFORE

1. Mix sage, shallots and butter with wooden spoon. Keep sage butter at room temperature.

Turkey Leg and Thigh Log

1. Remove giblets from cavity; cover in milk and refrigerate overnight.

2. Remove both legs and thighs; save neck and bones for gravy. Carefully remove bones from leg and thigh, keeping meat in one piece, ensuring skin remains attached. Using boning knife, remove sinew and small bones from turkey legs. Lightly cut through leg and thigh meat to make multiple incisions. Trim leg and thigh meat to make it as square as possible (about 9 by 9 inches).

3. Season both sides of turkey with kosher salt and fresh cracked black pepper. Spread 2 tbsp of sage butter on surface of meat (but not side with skin).

4. Cut tinfoil and parchment paper into 12 by 12 inch sheets. Roll meat into very tight log. Wrap tightly with parchment paper then wrap tightly with tinfoil, ensuring a tight, even log. Twist both ends of tinfoil. Cover and refrigerate overnight.

Turkey Breast (Crown)

1. Using fingers tips, separate skin from turkey breast, but still keep it intact. Spread generous amounts of sage butter under the skin onto the breast meat. Smooth out the butter beneath the skin by gently applying even pressure to the skin.

2. Heavily season the entire turkey with kosher salt and cracked pepper, even inside the cavity. Cover entire turkey and refrigerate overnight.

THE DAY OF

1. Remove turkey breast from the refrigerator and let it sit at room temperature for 1 hour.

2. Set the oven temperature to 450 F and place turkey on roasting pan. Roast at 450 F for 20 minutes and baste often. Reduce temperature 220 F and insert thermometer through the thickest part of the breast.

3. When breast temperature reaches 90 F, remove leg and thigh log from refrigerator and place in 220-F oven. Roast turkey breast until internal temperature reads 155 F. Remove from oven.

4. Let turkey breast rest for 20 minutes; remove meat from bones and slice meat thinly.

5. Cook leg and thigh log until thermometer reads 165 F. Remove meat from tinfoil and parchment; save all the liquid for gravy. Slice meat log into .25-inch medallions, about 10 slices per leg.

RECIPE COURTESY OF CHEF ALEX CHEN

Ingredients

- 8 leaves of sage, thinly julienned
- 30 g finely diced shallots
- 200 g soft unsalted butter
- 1 whole fresh free range turkey (25 lb)
- kosher salt
- cracked black pepper

Complement your bird. Chef Chen's Madeira Wine & Giblet Gravy

The perfect accompaniment to Chef Alex Chen's Sage Butter Roast Turkey is this gravy, which will add the finishing touch of sophistication to your Thanksgiving dinner. Rich and flavourful, it will please even the most discerning of palates.

1. Roast bones in 450 F oven until brown; strain fat and keep for later.

2. In pot, stir roasted bones, vegetables, powdered stock, herbs. Add 5 litres of water. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer for 1.5 hours; skim and discard fat. Strain stock and discard bones; set stock aside.

3. In pot, heat 3 tbsp of fat (from roasted bones) and 3 tbsp of sage butter (from turkey recipe above). Add 5 tbsp of flour; mix thoroughly; cook at low heat for 3 minutes. Remove giblets from milk and add; cook for two minutes.

4. Whisk in wine and saved stock (from recipe above). Simmer 20 minutes. Remove giblets from gravy, chop as small as possible. Add back to gravy. Season with salt and pepper.

Final meal on outdoor grill

Ingredients

Avocado-Pineapple Salsa
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) each lime juice and tequila
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) brown sugar
- 1/2 ripe pineapple, trimmed and cut lengthwise into slices
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) white balsamic vinegar
- 1/2 small red onion, diced
- 1 jalapeno pepper, stemmed, seeded if desired, and minced
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) chopped cilantro
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) olive oil
- 5 ml (1 tsp) salt
- 1 ml (1/4 tsp) black pepper
- 1 ripe avocado, halved, seeded, peeled diced

Cumin-Glazed Ribs
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) paprika
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) each ancho chili powder and cumin
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) salt
- 2 kg (4 1/2 lbs) pork baby back ribs
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) chopped garlic
- 3 jalapeno peppers, stemmed and seeded if desired
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) ground cumin
- 45 ml (3 tbsp) hot sauce
- 250 ml (1 cup) freshly squeezed lime juice
- 5 ml (1 tsp) salt
- 250 ml (1 cup) honey

1. Salsa: In bowl, combine lime juice, tequila and brown sugar. Add pineapple and toss. Let marinate 30 mins. Remove pineapple and set aside.

2. Transfer marinade to saucepan over medium heat. Add vinegar and simmer, stirring often until reduced by half. Remove from heat and cool.

3. Heat grill to medium-high. Wipe grill with an oiled towel and place pineapple on grill at an angle. Cook for 6 to 8 minutes, turning frequently, until outside of pineapple is lightly golden and caramelized.

4. Remove from grill, let cool and cut into 5-mm (1/4-inch) dice. In a bowl, combine pineapple with vinegar mixture. Gently toss in onion, jalapeno, cilantro, olive oil, salt, pepper and avocado. Taste and adjust seasoning as necessary.

5. Ribs: In bowl, combine paprika, chili powder, cumin and salt. Pat spice mixture all over ribs and let stand for 30 minutes.

6. Heat grill to 150 C (300 F). Place ribs in a single layer in a baking pan and add 5 mm (1/4 inch) of water to pan. Bake uncovered for 45 minutes on grill with lid closed. Cover ribs with foil and bake for an additional 45 minutes or until very tender.

7. Glaze: Purée garlic, jalapenos, cumin, hot sauce, lime juice and salt in food processor. Pour mix into saucepan and stir in honey. Cook over low heat for 20 minutes, stirring constantly and being careful not to burn.

8. Increase grill temperature to 230 C (450 F). Remove ribs from baking pan and spread generously with glaze. Grill for 5 minutes per side, frequently brushing with additional glaze.

9. To serve, cut ribs apart and serve hot with salsa. THE CANADIAN PRESS/ CALIFORNIA AVOCADO COMMISSION

Mexican touch. Mole Pulled Pork Sandwich

1. In saucepan over medium-high, heat oil. Add pork and sear 3 minutes per side. Set pan aside off heat.

2. In blender combine almond butter, tomatoes, garlic, shallots, cocoa powder, cinnamon, black pepper, red pepper flakes, cloves and water. Purée until smooth, add to pork.

3. Bring pork and sauce to simmer over medium heat. Cook uncovered, stirring, 20 minutes.

4. Use slotted spoon to transfer pork to cutting board, then use 2 forks to pull and shred it. Return the pork to the sauce and stir well. Season with salt.

5. Divide the pulled pork between the buns. Top with scallions. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp olive oil
- 1 lb pork tenderloin, cut into 2-inch chunks

GORGE ON TRAIL FUN THIS THANKSGIVING

The Trans Canada Trail will soon become the world's longest recreational trail. By 2017, it will extend over 23,000 kilometres and connect Canada from sea to sea to sea. Fortunately, much of the trail is already complete and ready to be enjoyed by you and your family. This includes a very popular section that runs through the Kawarthas and Northumberland.

This portion is a four-season pathway with plenty of historic and cultural heritage, linking five communities, parkland, farmland and the natural environment. It is ideal for hiking, walking, cycling, horseback riding and cross-country skiing.

Toward the west, the trail can be accessed near the intersection of Orange Corners Road and Cottingham Road, southeast of Omemee. Walking west from here, you will discover a trestle bridge that spans 29 metres above the beautiful Buttermilk Valley.

The trail also runs east of Hastings (Canada's new fishing capital), just east of Rice Lake. This stretch offers scenic views down to the Trent River.

You can also start your weekend fun in Campbellford, one of the most picturesque examples of small-town Ontario.

Here, the trail crosses over Ranney Falls gorge on a suspension bridge that gently sways a knee-knocking nine metres above the Trent River. The crossing takes you into Ferris Provincial Park.

With so much to be thankful for this weekend, be sure to take in Ontario's trailside beauty in the land of 1,000 perfect getaways. After a short stroll, we're sure that "Our Favourite Place" will become your favourite place.

Regular-season games fall victim to NHL lockout

Two weeks erased.
With no bargaining sessions planned, it seems unlikely cancelled games will be tacked back on

The real losses have begun.

Two weeks of the NHL's regular season was wiped off the calendar Thursday, and it appears almost certain those won't be the only meaningful games sacrificed during the lockout.

It's an all-too-familiar position for the league, which attempted to strike a conciliatory tone in announcing the cancellation of the opening 82 games of the 2012-13 season.

"The game deserves better, the fans deserve better and the people who derive income from their connection to the NHL deserve better," said deputy commissioner Bill Daly. "We remain committed to doing everything in our power to forge an agreement that is fair to the players, fair to the teams and good for our fans."

The earliest this season could start is Oct. 25.

While it remains possible some of Thursday's cancelled games could still be tacked on to the schedule, it would require a major change in the direction of talks — not to mention a quick solution.

That seemed extremely unlikely with no bargaining sessions scheduled and the lockout about to enter its fourth week. The sides really haven't got down to meaningful negotiations despite meeting regularly since the end of June.

Donald Fehr, the NHLPA's executive director, once again criticized owners for enacting the lockout last month. He also questioned their motives in light of the cancellations.

"If the owners truly cared about the game and the fans, they would lift the lockout and allow the season to begin on time while negotiations continue," said Fehr. "A lockout should be the last resort in bargaining, not the strategy of first resort. For nearly 20 years, the owners have elected to lock-out the players in an effort to secure massive concessions."

The sides haven't been able to find agreement on how best to split up the $3.3 billion US the NHL took in revenues last season. The league is looking for an immediate rollback on salaries, while the players are pushing to have all current contracts honoured.

Against that backdrop, Daly claimed earlier this week that the lockout had already cost the league almost $100 million in lost revenue.

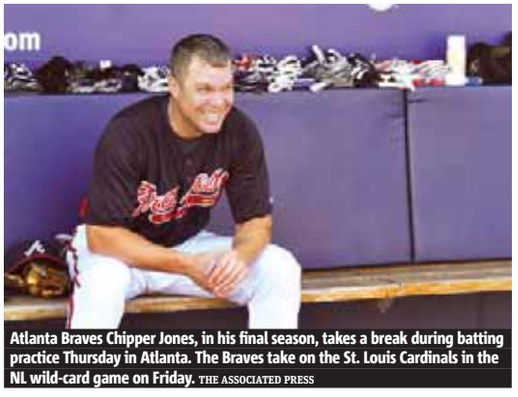
THE CANADIAN PRESS

History of unrest

- The NHL has simply been unable to break free from its recent history of labour unrest.
- It lost 468 games during the lockout-shortened 1994-95 season and all 1,320 regular-season games that were scheduled in 2004-05, which was wiped out in its entirety by another work stoppage.

A nearly empty hockey-stick rack in the Buffalo Sabres locker room is shown at the First Niagara Center in Buffalo, N.Y., on Sept. 25. The NHL has cancelled 82 regular-season games scheduled through Oct. 24. DAVID DUPREY/THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Is new one-and-done format fair for all?



Atlanta Braves Chipper Jones, in his final season, takes a break during batting practice Thursday in Atlanta. The Braves take on the St. Louis Cardinals in the NL wild-card game on Friday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

By sometime Friday night, either Chipper Jones will be out of baseball or the defending World Series champion Cardinals will be out of the playoffs.

One and done.

A pair of wild-card matchups — St. Louis at Atlanta, then Baltimore at Texas — to decide which teams advance to the next round. Part of the new, expanded post-season format, where 162 games, six months of grinding and upward of 50,000 pitches get boiled down to nine all-or-nothing innings.

Dramatic? Certainly. Fair? Well, depends on who you ask.

"I hate it. I'm old-school. I'm old," Washington manager Davey Johnson said.

At 69, he has a vested interest. His NL East champion Nationals will visit the Cardinals-Braves winner Sunday in Game 1 of the division series.

"I love it," Cleveland closer Chris Perez said. "If you are in it, or watching it as a fan, it doesn't get any more exciting."

Or, as Texas general manager Jon Daniels summed up on the eve of his team's big game: "I'll let you know tomorrow." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Argument for more

- Major League Baseball hoped to get more clubs involved in post-season races, and the Angels, Dodgers, Brewers, Rays and Pirates were among those that enjoyed the chase this year.
- There also was some sentiment that wild-card teams were getting it too easy and winning the World Series too often, as the Cardinals did last season.

Describing himself as "a proud gay man," Puerto Rican featherweight Orlando Cruz on Thursday became what is believed to be the first pro boxer to come out as openly homosexual while still competing. His announcement comes two weeks before the 31-year-old left-hander challenges Mexican boxer Jorge Pazos for the WBO Latino title.

World Cup qualifying.
Canadian coach insists his team is focused on Cuba

Canada's hopes of advancing in World Cup soccer qualifying will most likely come down to a crucial showdown Oct. 16 in Honduras.

But Canadian team coach Stephen Hart isn't looking that far ahead, saying his squad's focus is firmly on its Oct. 12 game against winless Cuba (0-4-0) at BMO Field in Toronto.

"It's a very dangerous thing to play a game before it arrives," Hart said during a conference call Thursday. "They (Cubans) are a proud people and a proud team and they're not going to lie down for anybody."

Canada (2-1-1) is tied with Honduras at seven points in Group C, but is third in the group due to Honduras' superior goal differential. Each team has two games remaining, with the Hondurans facing first-place Panama (3-1-0) on Oct. 12.

The Canadians earned a 1-0 win in Cuba on June 8 and must finish in the top two to move on to the final stage.

Colts to honour ailing coach

The Indianapolis Colts plan to honour coach Chuck Pagano by selling T-shirts, handing out wristbands and promoting a blood drive.

Pagano was diagnosed last week with a form of leukemia and has been undergoing treatment at an Indianapolis hospital.

Beginning Friday, the team's pro shop will sell special edition Chuckstrong T-shirts for $20. Proceeds, team officials say, will benefit leukemia research at the Indiana University Simon Cancer Center.

Flopping penalties not a hit with Raptors guard

NBA. Lucas III says it will be difficult to remove tactic

John Lucas III says there's not a player in the NBA who doesn't flop.

"Bigs flop, guards definitely flop. Any given day, some guy grabs my jersey, I'll sell it like they grabbed my spine outta my body," Lucas said, grinning.

The Toronto Raptors guard has mixed feelings about the NBA's new penalties for those dramatized dives to the floor — think of a person touching an electric fence — to gain a foul call.

The league announced Wednesday that it will review flopping footage, with players receiving a warning the first time. A second offence will cost $5,000 US, with fines increasing to $10,000 for a third violation, $15,000 for a fourth and $30,000 the fifth time. Six or more could lead to a suspension.

Speaking while on Day 3 of training camp, Lucas says players have been guilty of some serious overacting the past couple of seasons, drawing the ire of a league intent on cleaning up its image.

Toronto Raptors John Lucas III, left, and Linas Kleiza receive some ice therapy during training camp in Halifax on Thursday. Players taking bumps is part of the game, but flopping in recent times has drawn the ire of the league.

ANDREW VAUGHAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

"Faking like they got poked in the eye ... everybody faking like somebody just ripped their arm off," Lucas said.

But the four-year NBA veteran said it will be difficult to completely remove a tactic many have perfected over a lifetime of playing.

"You learn (flopping) as a child, and now it's taken away, so it kind of makes you take away part of your game," Lucas said. "They add all these rules in, and then when the game comes, it just comes naturally."

The five-foot-11 point guard said, because of his size, embellishing the contact when he bumps into a bigger player is sometimes the only way to get to the free throw line.

"When you get bumped, you're going to yell and go, 'Aah!' Like 'It might not be a flop, I'm just letting you know, I'm getting bumped, can you please give me a call? I'm just selling it so you can actually see it.'"

The NBA players' association has filed a grievance over the new penalties.

ARGOS' ADDITION OF BACKUP QB PROVES WISE

CFL EXTRA POINTS
Dan Toth
toronto@metronews.ca

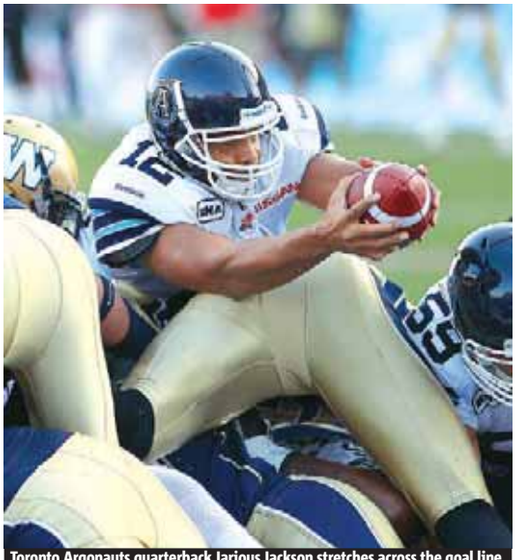
Toronto Argos: Considering Ricky Ray's durability throughout his career, it may have seemed a waste to sign veteran backup Jarious Jackson to back him up. But with Jackson's performance last week over Winnipeg as Ray recovers from a knee injury, Jackson has proven himself a cost-effective insurance policy. Jackson was calm and cool in his rare start, justifying his place on the roster, and saving Toronto's season.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers: It might finally be time for Buck Pierce to take up a less dangerous career … like bullfighter. The worst fears of Blue Bombers fans were realized this week when the team confirmed Pierce suffered a minor concussion in last week's loss to Toronto after a vicious headshot from the Argos' Brandon Isaac, who was later fined. It might not be fair to label Pierce injury-prone, but he has seemingly spent as many CFL games sidelined with wounds than inside the stripes.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats: We argued earlier this season that the Ticats were the team to beat in the East. Not quite, but while they've struggled on both sides of the ball they also look like an elite team when Burris is on fire and the defence plays to its capabilities. This team just needs to develop some consistency in the final third of the season and nobody will want to face them in November.

Montreal Alouettes: We often focus on the Als offence and aging quarterback Anthony Calvillo, but it's the defence that might keep this team from contending for a Cup this season. Although still in first place in the East, the Als defence appears vulnerable to the big play, as Henry Burris proved last week.

Saskatchewan Roughriders: Only in the CFL can teams stink for weeks on end before suddenly looking like a contender. The Lions did it last season and now the Riders, who lost five straight earlier this year, look like a dangerous team after back-to-back wins over Calgary and B.C. The Green Machine might be unbeatable in the playoffs, especially if they can secure a home game where their rowdy fan base gives the home side a considerable advantage.



Toronto Argonauts quarterback Jarious Jackson stretches across the goal line for a touchdown against the Winnipeg Blue Bombers last Saturday in Winnipeg. Jackson has proven himself a cost-effective insurance policy for starter Ricky Ray. JOHN WOODS/THE CANADIAN PRESS

MLB. Triple Crown winner not guaranteed AL's most valuable player award

Miguel Cabrera has his Triple Crown. MVP award, maybe not.

Hold on, now. How could that be?

Mike Trout, that's how.

It's the hottest debate in baseball, seemingly pitting old-school traditionalists against new-age number crunchers in a bench-clearing shouting match over what constitutes "valuable."

At stake is the American League's Most Valuable Player award, perhaps the game's top individual prize.

Cabrera capped an extraordinary season Wednesday night by becoming the first Triple Crown winner in the majors since Boston's Carl Yastrzemski in 1967. The Detroit Tigers slugger led the league with a .330 batting average, 44 homers and 139 RBIs — the standard statistical categories by which excellence was commonly judged for the better part of the past century.

Trout, however, made some history of his own. The Los Angeles Angels rookie quickly became a never-before-seen force prior to his 21st birthday, batting .326 with 30 homers and 83 RBIs. He also led the majors with 49 stolen bases (in 54 attempts) and 129 runs.

For anyone who thought winning the Triple Crown would automatically anoint Cabrera the MVP, take note of this: There have been nine Triple Crown seasons since the MVP award was introduced for each league in 1931. Four times, the Triple Crown winner was beaten out for MVP by a player on a pennant winner.

Anthopoulos primed to spend for upgrades

MLB. Armed with money and trade chips, Jays GM says he'll still 'have to be creative' to build a contender

A real sense of optimism surrounded the Toronto Blue Jays last spring. The feeling vanished in mid-June after a spate of injuries and would not return as the team settled for yet another mediocre season.

The Blue Jays closed things out Wednesday with a 2-1 win over Minnesota and settled for a fourth-place finish in the American League East at 73-89. The focus now turns to general manager Alex Anthopoulos, who will spend the off-season trying to build on a decent foundation via trade or free agency.

He has his work cut out for him.

The starting rotation needs a significant upgrade, questions have been raised about clubhouse leadership and there are several areas that need improvement for this team to be a contender.

What's clear is the days of banking prospects for the future appear to be over. Anthopoulos is prepared to be a buyer this winter and has confirmed the team's payroll will rise.

"It's not a bottomless pit," Anthopoulos said at his season-ending media availability. "It doesn't mean we can have everybody we want. We're going to have to be creative and make some things fit.

"But it's definitely more to work with than we did last year and that will certainly be exciting."

Manager John Farrell, who has one year left on his contract, didn't hesitate when asked what he'd like to see Anthopoulos target in the off-season.

"Same as a year ago," Farrell said. "Starting pitching."

The starters were hammered by injuries this season. Brandon Morrow, Kyle Drabek and Drew Hutchinson all missed significant chunks of the season.

The injury woes didn't help the overworked bullpen, which had to deal with major injuries to closer Sergio Santos and Luis Perez.

Toronto used 12 different starting pitchers and a franchise-high 54 different players over the course of the season.

"Stability and continuity always lend to the potential for more success," Farrell said. "But when changes were needed because of injury, we went to the next depth player and in some cases they might not have been fully ready or up to the same type of production to the player they were replacing."

Romero struggled mightily over the second half, finishing with a 9-14 record and a bloated 5.77 earned-run average. Morrow (10-7, 2.96 ERA), meanwhile, was one of the few bright lights in the rotation this season.

"There's no question that if the rotation can be shored up — and it needs to be — that's really going to dictate where this team goes," Anthopoulos said.

It will likely take around 90-95 wins to book a ticket to the post-season next year. Farrell said the team's performance on the mound will be key in determining whether that goal can be attained.

"Who we add to our pitching staff will have a direct bearing on that," he said. "There are positional needs based on turnover and free agency and contract situations. So upgrades are needed there. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Building blocks

Anthopoulos does have several building blocks in place.

- The farm system is considered deep and there are a number of prospects who might make for good trade bait.
- Edwin Encarnacion had a breakout season, Jose Bautista put up impressive numbers before going down with a wrist injury and Casey Janssen did a great job after taking on the closer's role.
- Catcher J.P. Arencibia and third baseman Brett Lawrie of Langley, B.C., have plenty of potential.
- Fellow youngsters Anthony Gose and Adeiny Hechavarria showed impressive flashes after being called up.

Toronto Blue Jays starting pitcher Ricky Romero, right, delivers a pitch against said he'd like GM Anthopoulos to upgrade the team's starting rotation this off-season.

Williams seeks to earn keep

High-priced defensive end Mario Williams is feeling the heat more than he's been applying it four games into his first season with the Buffalo Bills.

And Williams complained on Wednesday that a sore left wrist that's bothered him since the start of the season isn't helping.

"It's just lingering a little longer than I expected, and I just have to get back out there and try to deal with it and play better with it," Williams said, referring to an injury he sustained in the final week of the preseason."

As for his production, 1 1/2 sacks, 11 tackles and a fumble recovery, Williams acknowledged he has to do better.

The two-time Pro Bowl selection and feared pass-rusher isn't anywhere near the dominating form he had during his six seasons in Houston, where he set a franchise record with 53 sacks. That was the kind of production the Bills were counting on in March, when they made Williams the NFL's most expensive defensive player by signing him to a six-year, $100-million contract.

His arrival was regarded as a turning point for a small-market team making a serious commitment to retool a porous defence in a bid to end a 12-season playoff drought.

Williams was limited to two tackles on Sunday, and singled out by critics for the second time this season.

"If Mario Williams doesn't start picking it up, there are going to be a lot of 2013 free agents who suffer because so far, Williams has been an argument against spending big money," said Dan Pompei of the Chicago Tribune in submitting his vote in the AP Pro32 rankings this week.

Williams had been previously criticized by NFL safety-turned-broadcaster Rodney Harrison after failing to make a dent in a 48-28 season-opening loss at the New York Jets.

Saying he tunes out outside criticism, Williams is instead motivated internally.

"I feel my pressure, man," Williams said. "I mean, I know what's here and I know what I need to do."

Williams' presence has helped a defence that already has 10 sacks — six more than Buffalo had through four games last year. Inconsistency, however, has been a problem.

In two wins, the defence has surrendered only 31 points, 662 yards and had nine sacks and five turnovers. In two losses, Buffalo's allowed 100 points and 964 yards, while managing just one sack and forced three turnovers.

Bills coach Chan Gailey had a mixed response when asked of Williams' production.

Gailey began by saying Williams is "trying to play the best he can play."

That doesn't mean there isn't room for improvement.

"Can he play better? Yeah, he can play better. But there's a lot of guys that fall into that category," Gailey said, including himself as a coach. "Does everybody wish his numbers were up? Yeah."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bills' struggles

- Four games in, the Bills (2-2) are preparing to play at San Francisco (3-1) with a defence that's been inconsistent at best.
- It's coming off a monumental collapse in a 52-28 loss to New England, a game in which Buffalo surrendered 580 yards of offence — the second most in franchise history — and allowed the Patriots to score touchdowns on six consecutive drives during a 45-point second half.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Why set targets that are difficult to reach? Why take on more than you know you can handle? Saturn's change of signs urges you to get your priorities right — and think quality rather than quantity.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
What happens over the next 24 hours may well persuade you that it's time to call a halt to a partnership or relationship that, frankly, is no longer worth the time and the trouble. Better late than never.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You have only so much energy to go around, so don't waste it on trivial things. If you are torn between a social invitation and finishing your work, go for the latter. Yes, it's boring but it's got to get done.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Do not — repeat, not — gamble today. You may feel lucky but the planets warn that the game you are entering is rigged in some way, so steer clear. People who tell you there is nothing to lose are lying. It's that simple.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
You are worrying about a loved one for no good reason. Once you realize this, you will not only be more relaxed in your attitude but it will become easier to find ways to help them without either of you panicking.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
A friend will need your assistance today and if you are smart, you will drop what you are doing and help them out. Whatever sacrifices you make now will be repaid tenfold, or more, later on.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Saturn, planet of limitation, leaves your birth sign today. Hurrah! Now you can make full use of the Sun, also in your sign, to push ahead with a creative or artistic activity. Yes, it will be a success.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Be careful what you agree to over the next few days because if you take on any new duties now, you may regret it before the end of the year. Your diary is pretty full as it is.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You cannot change the mindset of those who do not want to know the truth. Some people prefer to live in ignorance but fortunately you are not one of them. That gives you a huge advantage. Use it.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Keep yourself to yourself today and spend some time thinking about the direction you want your life to move in. You don't have to make any major decisions. In fact, it would be better if you did not — for now.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You will find yourself up against an opponent you have no hope of beating today and the only sensible course of action is to back off. Everyone has limits but not everyone is aware of what they are.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
You need to get your attitude balance right. If you come on too strong, you will scare others away but if you are weak, they may walk all over you. Confidence is the key. Act self-possessed but be modest too. SALLY BROMPTON
